

CRITICAL MOMENTS. CRITICAL DECISIONS.

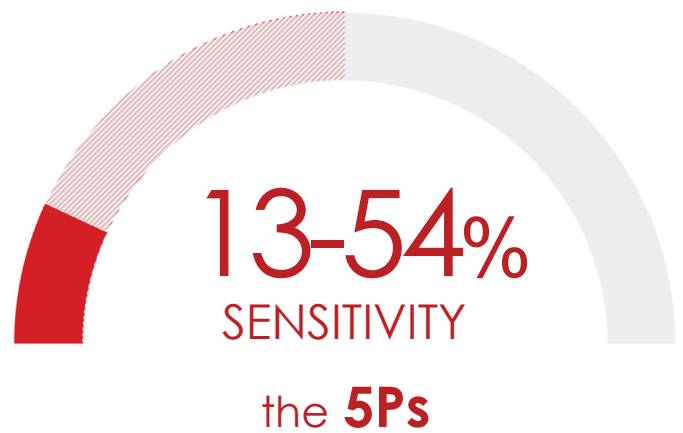

A TIMELY COMPARTMENT SYNDROME DIAGNOSIS IS CRITICAL

“As one of the major orthopedic emergencies, acute compartment syndrome carries significant risks when the diagnosis is delayed or missed.”¹

STIC PRESSURE MONITOR

CLINICAL ASSESSMENT

- High sensitivity and specificity rates (94/98%)
- Convenient, self-contained device for immediate and continuous pressure measurements
- Recognized as gold standard for over 30 yrs
- Strong clinical evidence proving accuracy and reliability
- Quick and easy set-up with low initial cost and economic use

- Studies have shown sensitivity rates as low as 13%
- Most of the signs and symptoms are late findings
- Cannot be used if patient is asleep or unable to cooperate
- Performs poorly as a diagnostic method alone

Add a definitive pressure measurement to your clinical assessments for data-driven and evidence-based decisions.

CRITICAL MOMENTS. CRITICAL DECISIONS.

Unique Design with Unique Benefits

The STIC Intra-Compartmental Pressure Monitor System offers several advantages in a compact, versatile instrument:

- Rapid Set-up: Simple, sterile, disposable
- Accurate: Built-in microchip technology
- Convenient: Pre-filled syringe, hand-held and easily transported
- Versatile: Quick or continuous pressure monitoring
- Cost Effective: Low initial purchase and economical use

Compartment syndrome can develop in patients with a palpable pulse, acceptable color, and normal sensory examinations. “Measurement of intra-compartmental pressure using a pressure monitor is the most reliable test.”²

The STIC Intra-Compartmental Pressure Monitor System is a convenient, self-contained, reliable unit for an immediate or continuous reading of compartment pressure.
